A DAINTIER DIET.

The Happy Thought That Came to the Timid Money Lender.

A gambler of Tin Can borrowed a sum from a money lender, and when the note fell due he said he could not settle.

"You must settle!" shouted the money lender. "If you don't settle I'll—"

But the gambler, taking a revolver from his boot, pointed it at the money lender and said:

"Eat that note or I'll let daylight through you!"

And the money lender, after a moment's silent thought, crumpled the note into a ball, put it in his mouth, chewed vigorously and then, with a gulp, swallowed the pulpy morsel.

"That dose saved your life," said the gambler in a mollified tone, and

"WAIT A MINUTE, MY FRIEND."

the next day he had a streak of luck and paid the money lender in full.

The money lender was much pleased with this honesty, and when the gambler a few weeks later called and asked for a new loan he was readily accommodated.

The gambler, having pocketed the new loan, sat down, dipped a pen in the ink and selected a sheet of paper whereon to write the usual acknowledgment. But the money lender hastily interposed.

"Hold on, my friend," he said, and he ran to a cupboard. "Wait a minute, my friend. Would you mind writing it on this soda cracker?"

A Candid Friend.

Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, chaplain of the United States senate and President Taft's pastor at a Washington Unitarian church, told a group of senators a few days ago of a letter he had received the previous morning from a strong Methodist friend of his. The letter read:

"Dear Doctor—Yesterday morning while on the way to services in my own church I was overtaken by the heavy rain we had. As I did not have an umbrella with me and was near your church, I went in, and for the first time listened to one of your sermons on the tenets of the Unitarian faith. Next Sunday I am going to carry an umbrella."—Saturday Evening Post.

It Wasn't Fair.

Several years ago Sam Jones, the Georgia evangelist, was at Emory Grove camp and the newspaper reports of his sermons caused him to complain. At the last service he looked down at the reporters, who sat at a table just in front of the pulpit, and said:

"And I want to tell you fellows that I like you a lot in spite of your manifold faults. You boys don't treat me right, though. You take my sermons and pick out a piece here and there and a piece somewhere else. Then you string the pieces together, and naturally they read funny."

"Now, suppose I reported the Bible that way! A man asks me what the Bible tells him to do. I read in one place, 'And Judas went out and hanged himself.' I turn over and read, 'Go thou and do likewise.' And in another place I find, 'And do it quickly.'"

"Now, you see, boys, that sort of thing won't do. It ain't fair."

Division of Labor.

There were points of resemblance between Mrs. Hammond and the lilies of the field. She had married a young man who had a good salary, but she herself had never earned a penny in her life, nor had she been blessed with well-to-do parents.

"We have a joint account in the National Fountain bank," she announced to one of her friends when she had been married a few months. "It is such fun to pay bills by check."

"What do you mean by a joint account?" asked the incredulous friend.

"Do you put in equal sums?"
"Oh, I don't put in any," said Mrs. Hammond. "Will puts it in, and I draw it out."

Awed by a Reporter.

Mr. J. P. Morgan never did have any toleration for newspaper interviewers. One young reporter did not know this. There had been an important business meeting, and when the reporter waylaid the banker the latter was in an even more irritable mood than usual.

"What decision was come to at the meeting?" asked the reporter.

Mr. Morgan turned on him sharply. "Don't you know I'm never interviewed?" he roared.

"Well, this time you're going to be," was the calm reply.
Mr. Morgan held his breath in amazement. Then he gasped and whispered softly, "My boy, if somebody doesn't kill you you'll be a great man some day."

THE WHITE "SIX"

A man doesn't have to be a mechanic to recognize the simplicity of the WHITE motor. If he is at all familiar with the appearance of motors he will be likely to think, looking at a WHITE, that some parts are missing. It is all there, however, and whatever parts have been eliminated result in its efficiency, simplicity and economy of operation. To the average man the WHITE motor is the most attractive part of the car, because its probability to need repairs is minimized, and, if it does need adjusting its construction is not so bewildering that he cannot make minor repairs himself, however little he may know of mechanics.

Five Important Features of White Motors

First of all, the four cylinders are cast en bloc—that is in one piece. This construction gives a rigidity to the crank case and keeps the bearings in alignment.

The cylinders each have a three and three-fourth inch bore and five and one-eighth inch stroke. The stroke is very long in proportion to the bore, resulting in increased power with less effort, which means maximum efficiency and gasoline economy.

There are four forward speeds, with direct drive on the third, which means a speed for every condition, giving greater road efficiency, and making it unnecessary to overtax the engine at any time.

WHITE motors are equipped with a honeycomb radiator in which the cooling surface is practically twice that of any ordinary kind. This radiator is the most efficient of which we know, and because of its high cost, is used only in the better grade of cars.

A double oiling system is used. After lubricating the connecting rod bearings, the oil drops into the crank case, where it is used in the regular splash system. Besides being a very effective means of lubrication, the economy of using the oil twice is apparent. The crank shaft casting and the side plates on the motor, which when removed make the crank shaft accessible, confine the oil to the inside of the motor, preventing a general besmearing with oil which would otherwise occur.
